History of the Stone Barn Farm:

Construction of the Farm began in 1700's and was the home to the Fisher's. Grandfather Adam Sebastian Fisher was said to have traveled with the Palatines to New York around 1710. The farm referred to by John Adam Fisher as "Poland" remained in the Fisher family for another 160 years until sold to George and Sonya Sampsell. The Fisher's played an important part as one of the pioneering families of this area with family members creating such icons as "Fishers Ferry" and the establishment of the 1st Lutheran Church in Selinsgrove. The property was home to the "swinging bridge" a rope bridge that traveled over the Penns Creek providing access for the migrant camps on the Isle of Que. The confluence of the Middle Creek and Penns Creek where home to the Indian nations of the Susquehannocks, Lenni, Lenape, and, Iroquois, a large hearth can still be seen at certain times of the year by the creek. The property also bared witness to the Fredrick Stump incident in 1768. We purchased the farm in 2010 and new from the start it had great bones. Since then we have been painstakingly restoring and renovating it to reveal it's original beginnings while tossing in a bit of modern charm and amenities creating a window to what was long ago. Every year we get to share this property with incredible families and get to bear witness to incredible love stories. This farm is truly an incredible place for one of the days that matter the most.
